Benefits of Landscaping

Landscaping enhances the beauty and functionality of land. The addition of patios, walkways, retaining walls, flowering plants, shrubs and trees adds to the property owner's enjoyment of their outdoor living space.

Well-designed landscaping can provide homeowners with money-saving benefits. U.S. Department of Energy studies show that carefully-positioned trees can reduce energy consumption for heating and cooling by as much as 25 percent. Well-designed landscapes can provide enough energy savings to return the initial landscaping investment in eight years.

Landscaping elements which block and absorb the sun's energy in the summer can help decrease heat buildup in the home, thus cutting cooling costs. Trees and other landscaping features that serve as windbreaks can help cut winter heating costs.

Landscaping can have an impact, not only on the resale value of your property, but also on how quickly your property will sell. The "curb appeal" of your home is the first thing your guests - and potential buyers - notice, and first impressions are lasting impressions. A well-maintained landscape creates the positive impression that the inside of the house is also well-maintained. Statistics provided by the American Nursery and Landscape Association indicate that landscapes can increase property values by 7 to 14 percent and "I appreciate the work that you all did, I think it looks fantastic and I think you have a great talent or vision. We had other landscaping companies bid out doing our house and none of them came close to your vision. I would recommend your company to anyone that asks us about our landscaping."

Pavers can be used in a variety of ways to enhance the function and beauty of your outdoor living space.

can accelerate the sale of a home by five to six weeks. Real estate experts have said that homeowners often recover up to 100 percent of their landscaping investment by selling their homes at higher values.
